Student Intern

Gail Cinoski is a senior at Salisbury University and is currently working as a student intern at the Nabb Center. She is a history major and minors in both anthropology and art. She has interests in ancient history and would like to work in a research-based environment or museum after graduation. Gail is working on several projects at the Nabb Center to gain experience in this field. One of the projects she has been working on closely with Ray Thompson, SU history professor and Nabb Center board member, is the data entering of 17th and 18th century documents from bachelor's tax lists to debtors found in inventories, which is being designed for a searchable database of over 11,000 entries. Upon the completion of this database, which focuses on documents that were collected by Thompson over a lengthy period of time, the database will be available at the Nabb Center for patron use.

Homecoming

Come join us on Saturday, October 14, to celebrate Salisbury University's Homecoming. Even if you are not alumni, we'll be here from 4-6 p.m. and would love to have you join us. This year features both a tribute to the late Dr. William Wroten, Jr. who was chair of the department of history for a score of years and a display of Salisbury memorabilia throughout the years. A favorite among the items found in the display is the 1947 Student Handbook, which details student curfews and privileges. The female students had to return to college by 10:50 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights and the freshmen had social privileges only two week nights per month and seniors one night each week. My how times have changed . . .

Dr. William Wroten Jr.

Now On Display

"Whistling Down Delmarva's Tracks: Eastern Shore Railroad Memorabilia" is a collection of railroad station photographs, railroad maps, artifacts and, of course, model trains. The display is available through September 30 at the Edward H. Nabb Research Center for Delmarva History Culture at Salisbury University. This exhibit is free and open to the public—of all ages. Family History Workshop

Dr. G. Ray Thompson

On Saturday, September 9, the Nabb Research Center hosts a Family History Workshop as a fund raiser for the center. This event is presented by Salisbury University professors and Nabb Research Center board members Dr. Ray Thompson and Dr. Clara Small. Topics covered include: how to start your family research, what sources to examine for genealogical study, how to take an oral history, special research techniques for African-American researchers and the interpretation of Colonial handwriting. The workshop also allows time for a "hands-on" work session. The cost of the workshop is $50 per person / $40 for students and members of the Nabb Research Center. The workshop is from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. with a one-hour break for lunch. For more information or reservations, please contact the Nabb Center at 410-543-6312 or visit the Nabb Center Web site at http://nabbhistory.salisbury.edu. The center is located in the Power Professional Building on Wayne Avenue on the east campus of Salisbury University.
